Funding Assistance Tech Teams

Do you have an infrastructure improvement project that you know you have to tackle, but aren't sure how to pay for it? Would you like to meet with funding program staff to learn about possible funding for your specific project? If so, we have an opportunity for you!

On Tuesday morning, October 20, we will organize "Tech Team" meetings with staff from a variety of funding programs. At your Tech Team meeting, you will have the opportunity to present your project to funding program staff, and then learn if their programs may be able to help your project. The Tech Team members will also help you develop a list of next steps for pursuing your project.

If you would like to request a tech team meeting, please have a community member (rather than your consultant) contact Cathi Read by September 22, 2015 at 360-725-3016 or cathi.read@commerce.wa.gov.

PLEASE NOTE: Due to limits on staff resources, all requests for tech team meetings may not be accommodated. There is required project information that must be submitted to participate, and Cathi will discuss this when you contact her.

Keynote Speaker: Stevan Gorcester, Director,
Transportation Improvement Board

Steve Gorcester has served as the Director of the Washington State Transportation Improvement Board for the past 15 years. His programs invested more than $1.5 billion in street and sidewalk repairs across Washington. After years of risky over-programming, Steve established long-term financial security and introduced strong incentives for sustainable design. TIB has applied Lean process improvement to its grant programs since 2008 and Steve teaches a popular course on Lean government. He started exploring LED streetlights in 2011 and recently negotiated a landmark partnership with utility companies to replace streetlights in all small cities. He is a committed Husky alum and native Seattleite.

October 22 8:00 - 9:00 a.m.
General Session: Wireless, Cybersecurity, and Infrastructure, Oh My!
Bill Schrier, Washington State Office of the Chief Information Officer

By 2016, 96% of adults worldwide will have access to a mobile wireless device. Public works, utility and public safety workers are, more and more, using mobile and tablet computers as well as smart phones to do their work. Increasingly, small computers, wireless and Internet capability are being built into everyday devices such as cars, and household appliances – this capability is often called the “Internet of Things”. Some utilities and public works departments are starting to internet-enable their switches, valves and other infrastructure components in order to improve control and management.

But, at the same time, the headlines are filled with news of hacking and security breaches using the internet. The personnel records and security checks of 18 million Federal employees were obtained and possibly altered, probably by the Chinese government. Here in Washington the records of up to 11 million Premera Blue Cross customers were hacked. Perhaps 15 million Americans have their identities fraudulently used each year, with a financial loss of $50 billion or more. Much of this fraud occurs online.

Can Washington cities and counties and utility districts take advantage of these technologies and networks, yet keep themselves secure from hacking and compromise of their systems? In 2012 Congress authorized construction of a nationwide wireless network called “FirstNet” for public safety responders including transportation, public works and utility departments. Congress allocated $7 billion for construction, and told FirstNet to create a plan for each state which must be approved by the Governor prior to construction. What wireless capabilities will FirstNet bring to enable improved management of infrastructure in Washington? Will it be secure? Can it help address the many cybersecurity challenges we face?
